

For Concreters in your area experienced in the exposed aggregate process PH: 0409 392 727

This Product is used to expose the aggregate on the flat surface in concrete to slow the setting of the top surface, this is then washed using high pressure water to remove the surface layer and expose the natural stone "aggregate".

IT IS RECOMMENDED you choose a Concreter experienced in the process and application of exposed aggregate concrete finishes. The timing, method of application, technique for removal of the surface and weather conditions are all essential in the process of achieving high quality results. Sealing of the exposed surface will protect the finish from staining and it is recommended, regular cleaning by pressure washing, when needed, will restore and refresh the surface. Re-sealing should be done every 3 years or when required.

Check your local Concrete Suppliers for colour displays and availability of aggregate in your area.

EXPOSED AGGREGATE RETARDER

A manufacturing process has been developed which results in a unique colour for our 'X'pose product and is described as having a variation of colours.

Our "Chameleon" product is unique, as it results in changes from an orange-red colour in the drum to a yellowish-green when applied, and is clearly visible to the naked eye when sprayed onto the concrete surface, ensuring that the application of the product is evenly distributed. This has a distinct beneficial effect when using the product.

The advantages of this finish to the customer are invaluable in the areas around the home, while improving the grip on sealed surfaces.

It has a modern look that enhances the value of the home and can be used effectively in driveways, walkways, entertainment areas, also around pools, and spas.

Exposed Aggregate Specialists are in various areas throughout the State and have a variety of displays with many colour combinations. The customers can select from these displays, and choose the one most suitable to enhance the finish of their home.
